4. The staff for the scheme consists of one maistry and three coolies. The post of the maistry may be replaced by one of Field Assistant on the scale of pay of Rs.25-2-45 plus usual allowances. The advantages of having a qualified Field Assistant will be that he can also be entrusted with entomological collection work besides supervisory work. The entomological data will serve to indicate the effectiveness of the control measures. Further details about the organisation of entomological work and the equipments necessary therefor will be furnished after the post has been sanctioned.

The strength of three coolies seems to be inadequate considering the size of the scheme area. The total area of the panchayat is about 12 sq.miles and only about 1/4 of this area is covered by the scheme for anti-filaria measures including the affected areas also. There are about 3000 houses in the scheme area. Considering the importance of the role of domestic breeding places in the output of C.fatigans, their effective control will be highly essential which it will be difficult to achieve with the present strength of only three coolies. The panchayat board is therefore advised to obtain sanction from the Director of Public Health for increasing this number from three to six coolies, which is reasonable and necessary.

5. Three mechanical sprayers are under use, and are in good working condition. Three more will have to be purchased for the use of three additional coolies recommended. The expenditure on these and other items recommended in these notes, which are not provided for in the budget estimate for 1951-52 can be met from the funds alloted by the Collector. This amount should be set apart from the annual receipts of the panchayat board and should be used only on emergent and unforeseen expenditures on anti-filariasis work which are not covered in the budget estimate.
